What's Your Next Step When it Comes to Sustainability?

Bring up the topic of sustainability and you're likely to get more questions and opinions than solid answers. Is today's green movement the real deal or a passing trend? Do distributors need to become certified? What are your customers looking for when it comes to sustainability? How can your business take advantage of green product requests?

As the nation's largest wholesale printing manufacturer, we want to do what's right for the environment and right for our distributors. Below is a list of action items Ennis is evaluating as we build our sustainability initiative.

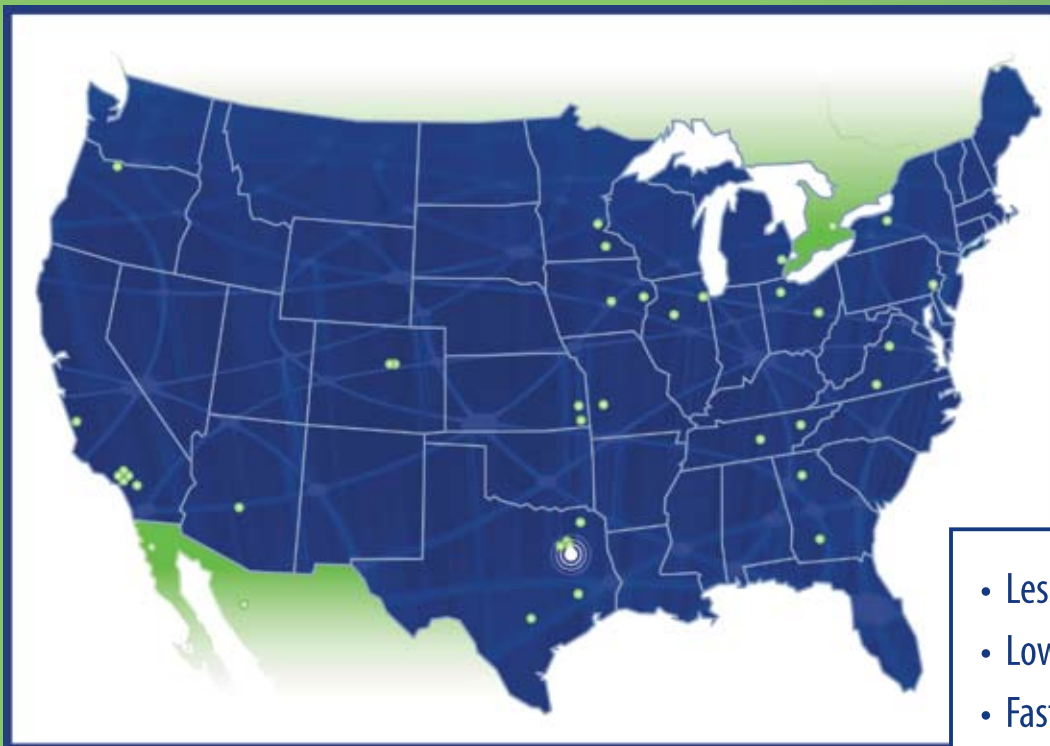

- Attend the VIP Series and learn the latest from sustainability expert Don Carli
- Switch all carbonless paper to NatureSolv™ Carbonless Capsule from Glatfelter
- Offer pre and post-consumer waste, and chlorine free paper stocks
- Utilize vegetable and soy based inks on presses
- Recycle press waste including paper, unused ink, cleaning materials and rags
- Use low VOC press wash to clean presses
- Receive FSC and SFI chain of custody certifications
- Use envelopes with biodegradable window films for our mailings
- Update mail lists frequently to reduce waste
- Operate and encourage an employee car pool program
- Offer sustainability tips and information to employees for home and personal use
- Start a recycling program for office waste
- Use energy-saving fixtures and appliances in all facilities
- Create a set program for regular maintenance and care of equipment and facilities
- Utilize infrared scanning to fix "hot points" on equipment and use less energy

As supply chain partners we can build the right strategy to increase sustainability and profitability. To keep up with our latest initiatives and request more information, visit ennis.com/sustainability.
